

February 18, 2022

Medical learners must navigate numerous transitions during their training. One of the most important, and anxiety-provoking, of these transitions is the transition to clinical practice. We all have vivid memories of our first experiences in the clinical setting, after years of class-based